

An interesting although - very informal observation

-

We trial poultry manure derived nutrient solutions on 'ornamental plants' one in particular a yellow Hibiscus never really 'did much' for over two years:

- i. it kept aborting almost all flowers
- ii. constantly under attacked by aphids

We increased its nutrient solution concentration by over 50 % and in a week - it completely 'turned around' with 'little to no' aphids